Work Element 1126: A Resilient Transportation System for Safe and Sustainable Communities

A. Project Description

Objectives

- Conduct a robust, region-wide assessment of the transportation system, Priority Development Areas (PDAs) and disadvantaged and vulnerable communities as identified in the State of California's CalEnviroScreen tool and MTC's Communities of Concern.
- Develop a suite of actions to be advanced at agency, local, regional, state and federal scales, including early and priority actions for transportation assets and services.
- Engage partners and stakeholders in an inclusive process where different ideas, values, and knowledge sets are leveraged to ensure that findings and outcomes are being addressed at appropriate scales, with a focus on robust representation and engagement of representatives of vulnerable and disadvantaged communities.
- Increase regional agreement on the tools, processes, models and data used in adaptation planning to build capacity among federal, state and local agencies, organizations to work together towards multi-benefit, shared solutions that are based in robust, inclusive assessments that can support the decision making necessary to take action.

Description

The 9-county Bay Area is made up of a range of diverse communities, economic centers, transportation and other major infrastructure located along the shoreline and that are highly vulnerable to current fluvial and coastal flooding and the threat of increased flooding due to sea level rise.

Through an inclusive approach involving key agencies and critical community stakeholders, this project will deliver a regional vulnerability assessment of, and adaptation strategies for, the Bay Area's transportation infrastructure, Priority Development Areas (PDA's) as identified in the Sustainable Communities Strategy (Plan Bay Area), and Communities of Concern as defined by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission.

Background

Some of the highest density development in the 9-County Bay Area is located on the shoreline, much of it on land fill. Many of these areas depend on ad-hoc shoreline protection that includes roadways and rail lines that are currently protecting communities and businesses. Without proactive intervention, a significant number of Caltrans assets, among other assets, in the Bay Area will be flooded by current and future conditions. In fact, the entire Bay Area transportation system is at risk, including local streets and roads, the airports, rail lines, ferry and transit services. Some of this infrastructure already experiences flooding during the winter months.

Multi-sector assessments, as have been conducted by the San Francisco Bay Conservation and Development Commission (BCDC) in partnership with the Metropolitan Transportation Commission (MTC) along with other critical stakeholders, are needed to understand the interconnected nature of our communities, our infrastructure and the relationship to the Bay shoreline. BCDC's Adapting to Rising Tides Program (ART) has developed a proven approach that will serve to advance a shared regional understanding of transportation and community vulnerability to flooding and sea level rise while identifying specific priority adaptation responses to protect transportation assets and the communities in which they serve. This information will be integrated into the Bay Area's Sustainable Communities Strategy, called Plan Bay Area, and in other appropriate regional planning documents.

A regional framework can support the development and demonstrate the interconnectedness of a foundational body of research, data and tools that can be used broadly across the region, and that ensures stakeholders are working from the same set of quality and verifiable data and accessing appropriate technical resources to arrive at a specific set of options and approaches to improve resiliency.

Additionally, this effort will serve to increase capacity within agencies and jurisdictions, and among community stakeholders, to incorporate adaptation strategies appropriately into work, as well as serve to strengthen relationships and increase consensus on actions. An important component of this work is a process by which partners from community-based and non profit organizations and residents of disadvantaged and vulnerable communities can help establish values and approaches that put the people and communities at the frontlines of climate impacts first.

B. Planning Factors Addressed

Develop regional-level priorities for the protection of critical regional infrastructure and the communities they serve; Protect and enhance the environment; disadvantaged/vulnerable communities; improve safety, reliability and sustainability of the regional transportation system; develop successful models of ongoing public participation and education.

C. Previous Accomplishments
